Council investing in city with $21M budget

BY BOB DEMAREE

Madison City Council adopted a 2022 budget of more than $21 million at its meeting on Tuesday outlining the priorities of Madison Mayor Bob Courtney, focusing on public safety, economic opportunity, infrastructure and quality of life.

Bob Courtney

"We have a great budget teed up for 2022," Courtney said. "The largest budget in the city's history. Over $21 million across our general budget in utility operations, but capital investment is going to be in the 10s of millions of dollars coming from public-private partnerships that we've created across the community to really accelerate economic development downtown and on the hilltop. Great things are in store."

The budget for the 2022 fiscal year was approved by a 5-0 vote of city council. The $21 million plan includes $13.1 million in general operations and another $8 million for operating the city owned water/sewer utility.

"Our business-minded approach to good government is leading the city to new heights. I am thankful for the support of the city council in passing a budget that will help achieve our goals. From investing in community safety, to expanding housing and economic opportunities, to improving our park system, the city is rapidly transforming toward a booming and bright future," Courtney said.

The 2022 budget increases public safety spending to $4.6 million, the largest such investment in the city's history. The funds will be used to strengthen law enforcement resources, enhance training for fire and police, purchase equipment, and implement the city's sidewalk improvement plan.

The budget, along with additional funding sources, will increase the city's investment in the P.A.C.E. Grant Program and blight elimination efforts to $560,000 over the next year. This program has already produced $4.3 million in investment in the community in less than two years of existence.

Courtney cited other highlights of 2022 public-private capital investments the city is pursuing including: $2 million in street improvements, $1.8 million from the city's Redevelopment Commission for infrastructure and quality of life investments across the city, a $6.7 million bridge replacement project by the City of Madison Port Authority, a

Council OKs land purchase for city's gateway

BY BOB DEMAREE

The process of beautifying the gateway into Madison from the Milton-Madison Bridge advanced again with the unanimous approval of a resolution by city council at its meeting Tuesday to acquire property at 150 Harrison Street, which was the site of Bullock's River City Marathon for many years.

The proposed purchase price for the 0.3-acre property is $100,000, from John and Libby Kinman, which resolution stated is below the $182,500 average of two appraisals as r by law.

"This property is on the east side adjacent to our new gateway as part of our gateway development strategy," said Madison Mayor Bob Courtney, who said the Kinmans wanted to see the site in the city's hands as Madison works toward developing the area at the intersection of Second and Harrison streets as the new gateway. "We are grateful to John and Elizabeth Kinman, not only for their investment in Madison, but also their great contributions to our gateway strategies.

"This is something we've been talking about as a strategy for quite awhile about improving our gateway," said Courtney, who said it will be a "great complement" to the Indiana Department of Transportation investment for the entryway.

Courtney said the city has not yet defined its plans for the property, but once acquired "we can begin looking at that whole corridor more comprehensively. He said the gateway was part of what has been included in Our Southern Indiana Regional Development Authority's application for the READI (Regional Economic Acceleration Development Initiative) grant through the Indiana Development Economic Corporation.

Bob Demaree/Madison Courier

The City of Madison added another piece to its US 421 gateway to Madison project Tuesday with a resolution to purchase the former Bullock's River City Marathon site (left), at 150 Harrison Street, for $100,000 to go with property purchased earlier on the west side of Harrison at the Milton-Madison Bridge. "It's an opportunity and it really is changing our gateway as you come into Madison," Mayor Bob Courtney said. "We've talked about it for a very, very long time, and now it's coming to fruition."

Board member Patrick Thevenow said he appreciated the Mayor's work on the gateway. "It was a priority for me," said Thevenow, since he began serving on city council. "It's going to be great for the city."

"It's an opportunity and it really is changing our gateway as you come into Madison," Courtney noted. "We've talked about it for a very, very long time, and now it's coming to fruition."

In other business, the council:

• Heard a report by Karen Rohfling on work by the Tree Board concerning plans to plant 20 to 30 trees in parks and along streets over the next year. She noted that 500 trees have been planted since 2008.

Courtney thanked the tree board for its work. "There's nothing more important in a beautiful community and it starts with trees. I totally believe in your mission and the quality of life it adds to the community."

There was also discussion on coordinating with the city in regard to work on its sidewalk asset management plan to repair approximately 9 miles of sidewalks. "A lot of the sidewalk damage has been because of trees, and we need to collaborate on how to replace those trees," Courtney said.

Rohfling agreed, noting the efforts by the tree board focus on utilizing trees that best co-exist with the sidewalks. "Trees change and do things you don't think they're going to do, but we're always thinking about that" and working toward ways to keep the trees from impacting the sidewalks.

• Approved a Historic Preservation Grant Nonreverting Fund which was required in order to accept a grant from

Local musician enjoys international success

"I was the typical Madison music kid," relates Tanner Keegan Owings. "I took piano lessons from Archie Coons. I was into theater and staging musicals. I had a high school band called Temperance that played the county fairs and the usual stuff. In addition to piano, I play guitar, and bass, plus I'm a singer.

"So when I graduated high school in 1999 I went directly to Florida and entered an intense, hands-on music production program at Full Sail University. They had us studying and playing all hours of the day and night, getting us ready for the true musician's lifestyle!

"After Full Sail I got an internship at Transcontinental Records, which exposed me to a lot of new influences and new people. I ended up joining a prog metal band called Indorphine that really helped up my level as a musician.

"With Indorphine I got to tour for about seven years, opening for a lot of bigger bands and making contacts in the industry. Two of those contacts, which would prove very fortunate later on, was

"Both of these very successful guys, Mark and Sam, were big fans of our band Indorphine, and they would help us any way they could. They all remember what it was like coming up, and these guys were happy to pave the way and give us a hand when they could.

"Anyway, some years went by, I guess it was around 2014, and I'm still living in Florida, playing with my own band, which is called the Tanner Keegan Band, and I get a call from Sam Rivers. Limp Bizkit was going out on tour and Sam needed a bass tech.

SUCCESS

"Now for those readers who aren't familiar with the crew of a super popular rock band, each of the musicians has a 'tech' who acts as a kind of assistant. In my case as the bass tech, it's my job to make sure Sam's bass guitars are always ready to go, in proper tune and with fresh strings.

"There are also guitar techs and drum techs. It lets the band members relax and not worry about their instruments. They just step on stage when it's time to play, we hand them their guitar or bass or drumsticks, and they know everything will be set up properly and ready to go.

"If it sounds like a pretty cushy job, you'd be correct. I've been to Japan, Korea, all across the US, of course. My most recent tour right before COVID was Russia.

"If it sounds like a pretty cushy job, you'd be correct. I've been to Japan, Korea, all across the US, of course. My most recent tour right before COVID was Russia.

"So in 2015 Limp Bizkit is the headliner on this thing called Shiprock, where all these bands and fans go out on a cruise ship for a week of partying and music. The band Tremonti was also on the cruise and their bass player, who happened to be Wolfgang Van Halen, had to leave.

"Like I said, I knew Mark Tremonti from my Indorphine days, so he asked if I want to step in and play bass. I've been the bass player for Tremonti ever since!

"Right now Tremonti's new record 'Marching In Time' is No. 1 in the U.K. in the Rock & Metal category, and it's No. 2 in Germany. I think it hit like No. 36 on the US Billboard chart.

"So I have that going on. Plus I'll still go out with Limp Bizkit when they need me. And in between tours I play a lot with my own band down in Florida.

"I've actually played some in Madison on my visits home. I played the Lighthouse last summer, and I jammed with Jimmy at the Taproom one night. It's really awesome to see so many great local musicians here in Madison, getting behind the live music scene. I actually wouldn't mind ending up back here some day!"

HOT TIP OF THE WEEK

It used to be, radio airplay was the mark of success for a musician. Today it's more about Spotify streams and YouTube views. And based on that criteria, the country artist Alexis Taylor is very popular indeed. She brings her polished Nashville sound (and 20,000-plus YouTube followers!) to Mad Paddle this Friday night. If classical is more your thing, the first of the Madison Performing Arts concert series shows is also this Friday, with two pianists at Trinity Methodist church. And on Saturday, be sure to get down to Mulberry and Second for the Grand Celebration of the huge Kindness mural. Artists have been working just about around the clock to complete it! Rusty Bladen and Bluebird Alley Band will be providing the entertainment from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

Charlie Rohlfing is a retired advertising man and partner in The Red Bicycle Hall music venue. Look for his distinctive fedora bobbing above the crowd, anywhere live local music is happening.

Needing space from brother

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I need help, but I'm so lost on what to do. Please help with some advice. I'm 52 years old and so broken. My mom passed away on Sept. 14, 2019, at home. I've had to live with my brother "Ed" ever since. Or, should I say, he has had to live with me.

I love him, but he can be such a challenge. Life is all about him. He sees a counselor weekly; he is a recovering alcoholic and drug abuser; he is bipolar and high — I mean high — anxiety and needs complete hip surgery.

I am his caregiver, and I'm really not happy. Everything I do seems to be for him. He is going back to drinking after 170 days of sobriety and smoking again after three weeks of quitting. It never ends. He stands and mumbles where I can hear him carry on, usually about me. Ed is very self-centered and spiteful, but he is my brother. I don't want to just abandon him, but I need a life. I don't know where to turn. He only gets $794 per month Social Security, not enough to maintain his own place.

I've been single since my youngest was 4 years old. She is 26 now. I would like to find my special someone to spend my life with. What should I do? — Overwhelmed and Unsure

Dear Overwhelmed: I'm so sorry for the loss of your mother. I'm sure you still miss her every day.

You have given everything to your brother, and it's time that he takes some responsibility for himself. Even though he's carrying a large load, there is no reason he can't accept some part-time work to supplement his Social Security and get a place of his own. It's great that he is in therapy, but he should also look into Alcoholics Anonymous and Narcotics Anonymous for additional support in his battle with addiction.

As for your own well-being, reach out to your local Al-Anon chapter to meet others going through similar situations with their loved ones.

Remember that creating distance between you and your brother is not an abandonment; it's a boundary. You can only give someone else a tow if your own tank is full. If you're running on empty... well, then you'll both get stuck in the mud.

Take a deep breath and write down a list of things you're grateful for. Often, when our lives feel like they're spiraling out of control, we become so overwhelmed that we feel helpless. This exercise will help put things in perspective.

When's it OK to be a bailing bestie

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: Under what circumstances is it OK to cancel your plans with one friend in order to spend time with someone else?

I have a friend who repeatedly cancels her plans with me if she suddenly gets an invitation from someone who is higher status/ more socially prominent. I've tried to talk to her about this, but she feels I am being too sensitive and that it's best to "keep things loose," with the understanding that both parties are free to opt out if something else comes up. The frequent cancellations make me feel like I'm her "backup friend," with whom she only spends time if she doesn't get a better offer. What do you advise? — Blown Off

Dear Blown Off: If a friend makes you feel like a backup, she is no friend at all. Even the term "backup friend" is an oxymoron; there's no such thing!

Once you commit to plans, you should honor that commitment. That doesn't mean there's no room for flexibility — we're all busy, after all — but a pattern of blowing you off for "higher status" company is unkind and unfair.

I would firmly tell this "friend" that you honor your word after making plans with someone and that you expect her to do the same. If she continues to blow you off, she's probably not even worth penciling in.

Dear Annie: I am turning 38 this year. I'm a father of two with a third due in November — this time, a girl.

I've always had an exciting life and liked to party hard with my friends and sometimes with my wife. I like to live on the edge, but recently, things are changing.

My friends think they want to chill and not do the same things we have done in the past. My wife says I need to chill, too, and just take it easy.

I feel different this time around. I feel upset when they don't want to hang out and just have boys time. I can't sleep sometimes, and I fight with my inner self from time to time.

I do still go out and make new friends, but it's not the same, and they're not like my old ones. I don't feel happy about this whole situation.

What should I do? — Man-child

Dear Man-child: It sounds like your friends are experiencing a shift in priorities. Having a family doesn't mean giving up what makes you happy, but it is about compromise and putting others' needs above your own.

Perhaps it's time to reexamine your priorities, too. As a father of almost three, you should put being a good role model and taking care of yourself to better support your family at the top of the list.

Commit to balancing boys time out with more boys time at home with your sons, and girls time with your wife and daughter when she arrives. Partying hard is not good for your health, anyway, and it doesn't set a good example for your kids; they need their father around. Spend time and hang out with your old friends, of course, but give the toned-down activities they're into these days a shot.

You said it best: Things are changing. With the start of this new chapter, expect there will be more shifts, but treasure all there is to be excited about at home, not just on the edge. Your family will surely appreciate your presence and support.

Madison invests in blight elimination and improved code enforcement

Agreement with iWorQ Systems puts city in step with county, Hanover

BY BOB DEMAREE

In an effort to strengthen the city's enforcement of nuisance issues and to provide more efficiency in its planning office, the Madison Board of Public Works and Safety approved a professional services agreement Monday with iWorQ Systems.

It's the same software that the Town of Hanover's planning office began using earlier this year and that Jefferson County adopted about a month ago. The contract with iWorQ Systems for the next year costs $12,500.

Nicole Schell, director of planning, said the City of Madison will be using permit management software, citizen portal and code enforcement management software to get started.

"It gives us the ability to track everything online, receive complaints online and then people can track code enforcement," Schell said. "This really streamlines our procedures. Our code enforcement is currently just ran by an Excel sheet internally and this will increase those capabilities."

Mayor Bob Courtney said the iWorQ Systems provides a means for the city to improve how it manages the building and planning department with a software that is cloud-based.

County Surveyor Mike Pittman said the county planning office has found the software "very easy to work with." He said the software takes all the Excel spreadsheets and makes it easier. "There are mechanism in iWorQ that you can automatically pull up due dates, you can look at past history, and you can take all the old spreadsheets, and it will load them in, and tie it to the parcel numbers." He said if a particular property shows a constant occurrence of complaints that it will be more easily recognized.

Courtney said he likes the continuity with Madison using the same software as Hanover and Jefferson County. "From a user's perspective, there's going to be some familiarity there," he said.

Additionally, Courtney said it will be helpful in the city's effort toward eliminating blight. "Because it is cloud-based, it's very well organized and it will keep a history of any complaints with that property, but we're also going to be able to identify how we solve that, and we will get a reporting element out of that."

Courtney said the iWorQ software will also help staff and property owners with an online permitting process for reporting, scheduling inspections and doing plan reviews. "It's a leap forward compared to where we have been" with the current process being primarily manually driven and not accessible when out on the field.

Because the program is cloud-based, the information can be accessed from most any location as long as there is Internet, a connected phone or tablet, said Pittman, who noted his office will be getting tablets so the information can be accessed and photos can be loaded into the database while they are out in field.

"It's been needed for a long time," said Courtney. "It really fits in with the goals we have for improving the operations for building and planning. It's definitely making a bigger investment in code enforcement."

In other business, the BPWS:

• Agreed to a professional services contract with Thomason and Associates and the Walker Collaborative, consultants both of Nashville, Tennessee, for $45,485, to assist the city in updating its historic district design guidelines.

Schell said only a small portion of that would be paid by the city with most of the money provided through grants the city has received through the preservation office of the Department of Natural Resources.

Schell said the city currently uses design guidelines that have not been updated since 2009. "This will help us to bring those into the 21st century and really focus on current preservation practices," she said. "Some of the elements they recommended in 2009 aren't the best practice any more."

Schell said there will be four phases to the process and that current documents will be reviewed, public meetings will be held, new design guidelines will be drafted then those draft guidelines then will be presented to the public.

"We hope we can incorporate all the changes that the board has previously talked about in the last couple of years, and really get them updated" so it doesn't have been done for another 10 years, Schell said.

• Discussed a memorandum of understanding with the Salvation Army to provide an emergency winter shelter, but tabled action to the Nov. 1 meeting of the Board of Public Works and Safety.

Courtney noted the Salvation Army has made upgrades to its building at 331 East Main Street by adding shower facilities. He said one of the reservations the city has in its agreement with the Salvation Army is in the requirement that the shelter only be opened when the temperature is 32 degrees or less by 5 p.m., depending on the availability of volunteers.

"We've talked about that with the regional officers of the Salvation Army to get that to be more perspective," Courtney said, noting the hope is for guidelines to open the shelter if temperatures of 32 degress are anticipated at anytime during the night. "We have not been successful in doing that ... We want to keep that conversation going" because they want to "minimize the risk for the vulnerable people who are out in the elements."

Courtney said there are challenges for Salvation Army in the training that volunteers need plus being available to work all night long in some instances. He noted there have been instances when it has been rarely used because the temperature wasn't low enough or no one had signed up to use the shelter after all the work was done to prepare it. Courtney said there are complications in operating the shelter, and it's "not always as simple as it sounds" but "we still need to be able to provide the service if it's needed."

He noted that "on average when it has been open, there would be between two to eight people."

City of Madison receives Community Program Innovation Award for job program

BY THE COURIER STAFF

The City of Madison has been honored with a Community Program Innovation Award for its Temporary Job Replacement Program from Accelerate Indiana Municipalities (AIM).

The city won the award in the under 20,000 population category.

"I'm very proud of the city team receiving statewide recognition for our efforts," said Madison Mayor Bob Courtney. "Delivering services and planning for the future while navigating through dozens of pandemic-related mandates, supply chain disruption, and labor shortages, has been a challenge. We have a vision and a plan."

AIM cited Madison for its response following required closings of non-essential services at the start of the COVID-19 pandemic in March 2020. With the sudden loss of income for employees and self-employed small business owners, AIM noted that opportunities were offered for temporary employment. The program was open to any city resident, but priority was given to displaced workers in service and manufacturing industries. Using funding from revenue generating areas of the city as well as re-appropriating funds from the annual budget, Madison was able to temporarily hire about 50 workers for up to 30 hours per week for 60 days. At the conclusion of the program, some were offered a permanent, full-time position with benefits and many chose to stay with the city.

Matt Greller, chief executive officer of AIM, said, "The Madison Temporary Job Replacement Program is such a great reminder that when push comes to shove people look to their local leaders to guide them through a crisis. I am really impressed with the innovative, take-charge spirit happening in Madison. The Job Replacement Program is going to have a lasting impact not only on those who are now permanently employed, but also all citizens of Madison who saw what their city was willing to do when they were suffering. Madison is so deserving of this new award."

Hannah Fagen, the city's director of community relations who was recently appointed to the county's Animal Shelter Advisory Board, said the kennels now available at the shelter were "very dangerous for the dogs." She said advisory board member Dr. Joy Barron, veterinarian and owner of the Madison Animal Clinic, has found kennels that have bite guards, top coverings, and are much safer for the dogs, and that the shelter board wants to order 20 of those kennels.

She said the new kennels will also be a way to keep dogs safely outside while the shelter is being cleaned, and to give them some outdoor time. "I appreciate the Mayor and the city for providing funding for the kennels," said Fagen.

Fagen also provided an update on improvements being made to the animal shelter over the last month after the previous shelter director went on medical leave.

"We were in a dire situation," said Fagen, noting concerns about conditions at the shelter, and whether cats and dogs were being fed. Since then Fagen said conditions have improved and efforts are currently underway to hire an interim director with interviews scheduled for this week.

She said the advisory board needs to work toward reviewing the interlocal agreement for the animal shelter between the city and the county. "There might be some changes we need to make," said Fagen, adding the last time it was reviewed was in 2007.

Fagen said the land and lease agreement needs to be reviewed — the city owns the land where the animal shelter is located but the county owns the building — since there was little awareness by the city that it owned the land until recently. She said city workers have recently cleaned up the area around the shelter.

Madison Mayor Bob Courtney said "a tremendous amount of progress has been made in a very short time" and emphasized there needs to be a commitment to the animal shelter.

"The animal shelter has gone unnoticed for a really long time," he said, commending action by several people "that in a short period of time a lot of corrective action has already been taken."

Little thanked city council for Fagen's appointment to the advisory board.

"She's the spark we needed. Thanks to the mayor, the council and the city for the donation for the kennels," Little said. "I spoke with the other two commissioners and they're in agreement we're going to put up the other half up for the kennels. With the strides we have made since Sept. 4, I was sick" by the conditions at the animal shelter. "I didn't know what we were going to do, but we're going to get there," and progress is being made, but it's going to take some time. "We are really on the road to recovery."

Crystal Beach groundbreaking set for Monday

BY THE COURIER STAFF

On-site construction of the $2.6 million Crystal Beach Pool House Rehabilitation Project at 404 W Vaughn Drive will begin next week with a groundbreaking event scheduled for noon on Monday.

The City of Madison has hired Poole Group Inc. of Dillsboro, Indiana, to complete the work. "Poole Group has completed construction plans and ordered supplies. They are ready to begin on-site construction," said Nicole Schell, director of planning for the City of Madison.

The Crystal Beach Pool House Rehabilitation project is focused on providing improved ADA (Americans with Disabilities Act) access within the site and extending the life of the facility. The project includes an improved concession area with ADA access to the street, restored perimeter fencing and walls, renovated accessible pool deck, repaired and renovated bath, shower and locker rooms for ADA accessibility, elevator for ADA access to second floor, renovated second floor restrooms for ADA access, and new pool liner.

"Crystal Beach is an iconic historic community asset built between 1937 and 1939 by the Works Progress Administration. It was very innovative for its time and is now irreplaceable. Vincennes architect Lester Routt designed the two-story craftsman-style structure with stone salvaged from a nearby mill. Preserving our past is great for our future," said Madison Mayor Bob Courtney.

The project is funded by Community Development Block Grants administered by the Indiana Office of Community of Rural Affairs and with a matching contribution from the City of Madison Redevelopment Commission.

Work is scheduled to be completed by the 2022 pool season.

Hanover approves $1.3M budget

BY BOB DEMAREE

Hanover Town Council unanimously approved a budget totaling $1,307,027 for 2022 at its meeting Tuesday.

The budget includes $720,504 in local funds and $586,523 in home-ruled funds.

In other business, a request was denied for a sewer adjustment for $205.53 by Kevin Clinton, 2215 South Logans Point Drive. The adjustment request was made after Clinton's grandson had turned on the water hose, and it ran for six days. Town attorney Devon Sharpe found in the town's ordinance that sewer adjustments may occur when "water usage was abnormally high due to a water leak." The Council voted to deny the request because the high water usage was not due to a leak.

In other matters, board member Kathi Scroggins, who serves on the county's Animal Shelter Advisory Board, said she anticipates a request will be forthcoming for the town to increase its funding to the animal shelter.

"Our budget is already set" for next year, she said, but noted increased funding is anticipated to be needed for the animal shelter.

Indiana GOP push against vaccine mandate faces hurdles

BY TOM DAVIES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Some conservative Indiana lawmakers wanting to stymie President Joe Biden's planned COVID-19 vaccine mandates for private employers are facing skepticism from their own Republican leaders and the state's largest business group.

While Biden has promised federal vaccination-or-testing regulations for all companies with 100 or more workers, bills are planned by some Indiana legislators who want to join other Republican-led states in trying to prohibit private companies from requiring vaccine shots.

Supporters of that action are already preparing to raise the issue again when the new Indiana legislative session starts in January, even though similar bills failed during the 2020 session.

"I just don't think that anyone has any right to tell someone else what kind of medicine they're to take in order to keep their job. That's just outrageous," said Republican state Sen. Jim Tomes of Wadesville.

31ST DISTRICT VOLLEYBALL

Trimble clinches 1st-ever 8th Region berth

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

OWENTON — Trimble County volleyball punched its ticket to the Eighth Region Tournament for the first time in school history with a resounding four-set win (25-19, 26-24, 22-25, 25-20) over Owen County in the 31st District Tournament semifinals Tuesday in Owenton.

The Raiders' have competed in volleyball for nearly 20 years and have had some impressive records along the way. Trimble has reached the All "A" Classic State Finals on several occasions and even posted a 43-match win streak against North Central Kentucky Conference foes.

But Trimble has never been able to solve the regional conundrum — getting bounced early from the district tournament in every tourney they have played since 2002 — until now.

"This is our first year back in the 31st and they really wanted to prove a point that this is where they belong," Trimble coach Shawna Jent said. "We've had that mentality since summer. Your administrators worked really hard to get you in the 31st, now it's your turn to represent and show them why you needed that switch. We call this the big dance and we've talked about it since June. So they're ready to dance this week."

David Campbell

Trimble County's Bailyn Clifford (43), Danielle Craig (14), Maggie Ginn (11) and Jenna Craig celebrate after the Raiders knocked off Owen County in four sets in the 31st District Volleyball Tournament semifinals on Tuesday in Owenton.

Trimble proved from the opening serve how ready it was to play. The Raiders controlled the first set from start to finish and held off a late Owen charge for the first set win, then crawled out of deficits of 16-11 and 20-15 to win the second set 26-24.

Owen (10-12) avoided the sweep by pulling away late for the third set win, but Trimble was unfazed and finished its business in the fourth. After opening with a 7-1 run, the Raiders found themselves behind 13-11 and still trailed 18-17 late before scoring eight of the final 10 points to clinch the win.

The formula was the same for Trimble throughout all four sets. The Raiders missed only 10 serves all night, giving themselves a chance, and their serve reception kept them in the game. Trimble's front line controlled the net and setter Danielle Craig kept the offense moving smoothly.

"Our serving has carried us all season. It's been one of those things we've really worked on perfecting. And our front row hitters, Bailyn Clifford and Aubrey Craig, really stepped up and hitting tonight and just placing the ball where they were," Coach Jent said. "That was the first time that Maggie Ginn has played all the way around and she did well for being only 5-foot-3, but she knows her position on the court and she plays it well. Jenna Craig did awesome with cover and tips as well. Gracie Jent really led us in ace control and servings. They really play well as a team and you can see it tonight."

Gracie Jent was 21-for-22 serving with two aces while Danielle Craig was 17-of-19 serving with an ace. Aubree Craig was 12-of-14 serving and had a team-high 12 kills, Jenna Craig was 11-of-13 serving with two aces, Ginn was 10-of-11 serving with four aces, and Clifford had eight kills to

Bengals romp, gear up for Ravens

BY MITCH STACY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — Joe Burrow chalked up another first in his promising NFL career — resting on the sideline in the second half because his team had a comfortable lead.

The second-year Cincinnati Bengals quarterback was all smiles Sunday watching backup Brandon Allen put the finishing touches on a 34-11 rout of the winless Detroit Lions.

For a change, Cincinnati (4-2) scored on its first possession and also played a solid second half. The win was gratifying for a team that let a close one slip away at home to Green Bay on Oct. 10 and now has to go to Baltimore to play the AFC North-leading Ravens on Sunday.

"We all have to step on people's necks when we need to," rookie receiver Ja'Marr Chase said afterward. "I think we did a good job of that today."

Burrow was 19 for 29 for 271 yards and three touchdowns with an interception. The top overall draft pick in 2020 has at least two touchdown passes in each of the Bengals first six games this season. Running back Joe Mixon had 18 carries for 94 yards, and caught five passes for another 59 yards and a touchdown.

Cincinnati held the league's worst offense to 228 yards.

"It's always important to bounce back after a loss," said linebacker Logan Wilson, who had his fourth interception of the season.

WHAT'S WORKING

Burrow has got the offense clicking, distributing passes to six different receivers in the Detroit win.

Rookie running back Chris Evans caught a touchdown pass and is making a bid for more playing time.

Tight end C.J. Uzomah has developed into a reliable go-to option.

Taylor-made Colts' offense responsible for generating big-play capabilities

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Jonathan Taylor has the Indianapolis Colts' offense humming.

He's running hard, running effectively, and over the last week running, perhaps, better than any other NFL back.

In a six-day span, the second-year running back had 327 yards from scrimmage, scored four touchdowns and almost single-handedly put the Colts back in the playoff conversation thanks to an offense that looks tailor-made for his skill set.

"He is a beast back there," quarterback Carson Wentz said. "He is so good between the tackles, but when he gets out on the second level, he is so fast. Like he is a different speed, and I know he is a problem for defenses."

The game tapes show it.

Last Monday, at Baltimore, he took a screen pass and sprinted 76 yards to the end zone for a 7-0 lead. Two quarters later, his power and vision were on display during a 4-yard TD run that made it 22-3. He finished with 53 yards rushing and a career-high 116 yards receiving.

The encore was equally impressive. Taylor got the Colts out of a second-half hole with an 83-yard dash before being caught from behind, a play that left teammate Michael Pittman Jr. in disbelief. Three plays later, Taylor scored again to make it 24-3. He wound up rushing for 145 yards with two scores.

"It really kind of stuns or shocks a defense and then it's up to that defense how are they going to respond?" Taylor said. "After a big play like that, you have to continue to keep your foot on the gas to not allow them to get a chance to settle back in."

For the former Wisconsin star, who nearly produced three 2,000-yard seasons in college, this is old hat. Over his last 13 games, including a playoff contest at Buffalo, Taylor has rushed for 1,291 yards and 12 touchdowns while catching 31 passes for 312 yards and two more scores. He's one of six players in franchise history to top 1,500 yards rushing and 2,000 from scrimmage in his first two seasons — and he still has 11 games to pad those numbers.

But the Colts are more concerned with counting touches to make sure Taylor has a chance to keep what had been a ho-hum offense cranking on all cylinders.

"In my mind, the perfect game he's getting at least 20 carries and having a big day," coach Frank Reich said. "In a good offensive game, we're going to have 30 carries, we should have at least 30 carries as an offense. I see 20 of those going to Jonathan."

WHAT'S WORKING

Wentz. Indy made the deal in March because it thought a change of scenery and a new supporting cast would help the once-promising quarterback regain his form. After a rough start, Wentz has strung together four solid games and has thrown only one interception this season.

WHAT NEEDS HELP

The secondary. Injuries have depleted this group. Yes, an improving pass rush should helps, but what the Colts need most is healthy front-line bodies.

STOCK UP

Darius Leonard. The two-time All-Pro linebacker had seven tackles, six solos, an interception that led to a score and forced a fumble on Sunday.

Gonzaga tabbed No. 1 in preseason AP men's basketball Top 25; UCLA, Kansas next

BY AARON BEARD
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Gonzaga carried a No. 1 ranking all last season before falling a win short of becoming college basketball's first unbeaten national champion in 45 years.

Mark Few's Bulldogs start this season in the same position, hoping to complete that final step this time around.

The Zags were the runaway top choice in The Associated Press Top 25 men's college basketball preseason poll released Monday. They earned 55 of 63 first-place votes to easily outdistance No. 2 UCLA, which earned the other eight. Kansas, Villanova and Texas rounded out the top five, while reigning national champion Baylor checked in at No. 8.

The Zags have accomplished just about every milestone possible in 23 years under Few other than cutting down the nets on the final Monday night of the season. They came close to completing the first unbeaten run since 1976 last year with a wire-to-wire No. 1 team, only to fall to the Bears in a one-sided final in Indianapolis.

Now they'll try again.

"It is quite an honor to be selected preseason No. 1 for the second consecutive year," Few said in a statement to the AP. "Our returning players realize the challenge of playing up to that level all year and look forward to it."

Gonzaga lost AP All-Americans Corey Kispert and Jalen Suggs to the NBA, but second-team selection Drew Timme (19.0 points, 7.0 rebounds) and starting guard Andrew Nembhard return. The Zags also bring in a top recruiting class featuring the nation's No. 1 overall recruit in 7-footer Chet Holmgren and a five-star guard in Hunter Sallis.

Going back to the 2019-20 season, the Zags have now been ranked in the top three for 32 straight polls, with 22 of those at No. 1.

THE TOP TIER

Third-year coach Mick Cronin has UCLA on a fast climb. Leading scorer Johnny Juzang (16.0 ppg) headlines a Bruins roster that returns nearly intact after last year's run from the First Four to the Final Four, where they lost to Gonzaga on a half-court shot in an overtime classic.

They are starting with their first top-10 preseason ranking since 2009 and their first top-10 ranking in any AP poll since spending 13 weeks there during the 2016-17 season.

"If we taught anybody anything last year," Cronin said this month, "your seed or your ranking does not matter come tournament time."

Kansas has the program's 10th straight preseason top-10 ranking, followed by the Wildcats and Longhorns, who open their first season under Chris Beard with the program's highest preseason ranking since 2010.

THE CHAMPS

Baylor has a second straight top-10 preseason ranking despite losing four starters from last year's title winner, including AP All-Americans Jared Butler and Davion Mitchell. The Bears will try to join Duke (1991-92) and Florida (2006-07) as the only schools to win consecutive titles since UCLA's run of seven straight from 1967-73.

"As we've talked with our team," Baylor coach Scott Drew said, "we have a unique opportunity."

BLUEBLOODS BACK?

Duke and Kentucky are starting with their typically high rankings after seasons unlike many in their tradition-rich histories.

The ninth-ranked Blue Devils are playing the final season under retiring Hall of Fame coach Mike Krzyzewski. They're coming off a 13-11 season that included missing the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1995. The 10th-ranked Wildcats are right behind them after a 9-16 season, the program's first losing record since 1988-89.

Indiana giving No. 10 Spartans silent treatment on QB choice

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Indiana coach Tom Allen is staying relatively quiet this week.

He's not talking about his options at quarterback for Saturday's home game against No. 10 Michigan State and he's certainly not going to provide practice updates on injured starter Michael Penix Jr. or backup Jack Tuttle.

Allen thinks it's more beneficial to keep his decision secret secret until kickoff.

"Jack, as always, will be ready to go," he said, declining to expand on Penix's status. "That's been something that's one of his strengths, his ability to be locked in and focused, and prepare at a high level, no matter what role he's asked to perform."

Tuttle started two games last season in place of Penix, leading the Hoosiers to a victory at Wisconsin in Indiana's regular-season finale before losing to Ole Miss in last season's Outback Bowl, finishing the game with a separated throwing shoulder.

Now it's Penix with the separated throwing shoulder joint that could keep him out as the Hoosiers (2-3, 0-2 Big Ten) try to right their season.

A year ago, Indiana recaptured the Old Brass Spittoon by shutting out Michigan State 24-0 in East Lansing. But this season, they've lost three times to teams currently ranked in the top seven and they're about to face a foe making one of the nation's biggest turnarounds.

Kenneth Walker leads the nation in rushing at 152.2 yards per game. Quarterback Payton Thorne and receiver Jalen Nalor appear to be in perfect alignment after last week's impressive showing against Rutgers.

Add a defense allowing 19.3 points per game and it's easy to see why Michigan State (6-0, 3-0) shares the East Division lead with No. 6 Ohio State and No. 8 Michigan.

Next up, though, may be he Spartans' biggest obstacle yet by reclaiming the prized trophy on the road, against a team coming off a bye and hungry to prove last season's magic was not an aberration.

"As I told the team, we're expecting them to be better than we've seen on tape," Spartans coach Mel Tucker said. "We're expecting them to be at their very best, rested and ready."

Sure, the uncertainty at quarterback could play to the Hoosiers advantage, though Tucker believes the foundation Michigan State has built over the past six weeks will be the key ingredient to an opponent still searching for answers.

THE BIG PROBLEM

Allen spent the bye week poring through game tape, analyzing with coaches and players what's gone wrong and came up with a simple explanation for the losses.

Penix threw three interceptions at Iowa with two returned for scores, threw three more in a loss to Cincinnati at home and then turned the ball over two more times two weeks ago at Penn State.

"The execution hasn't been what it was expected to be and the play of our quarterbacks, that to me hasn't been to the standard of what we know we have to have to win those kind of games," Allen said. "You play those caliber teams, whether you play them early or play them late, you have to be able to score points when you get down to the red zone and you have to be execute and throw and run the football and protect it."

STRIKING A BALANCE

Michigan State has been proficient this season by moving the ball and scoring on the ground and through the air this season.

It's changed the whole look of the Spartans offense and how others, like Indiana, attempt to defend them.

"It's like pick your poison," coach Mel Tucker said.

LET IT SNOW

Michigan State safety Darius Snow has steadily earned more playing time by performing well at practice. He's ranked among the team leaders in tackles (27), and he's rekindling images of two relatives who also starred for the Spartans.

Snow's father, Eric, played basketball for the Spartans from 1991 to 1995. His uncle, Percy, was an award-winning Michigan State linebacker in the late 1980s.

"He's worked really hard to get into the position he is now," Tucker said.

Boilermakers using creative combination to rejoin Top 25

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Purdue coach Jeff Brohm spent his bye week designing a creative game plan, capable of pulling off one of this season's biggest upsets.

He kept three quarterbacks on standby duty, asked receiver David Bell to play his typically dominant game and challenged his defense to deliver its best performance of the season.

The combination worked perfectly in a 24-7 upset of No. 2 Iowa and sent the Boilermakers back into the Top 25 for the first time in 14 years.

"Overall, it was the best execution we had all year long in all segments," Brohm said Monday, referring to his quarterback rotation. "It's about scoring points, scoring in the red zone, moving the ball, getting first downs, whatever it takes, we're going to do it. I think all of our quarterbacks provide an element that can help us win."

Brohm improved to 4-1 all-time against Iowa, Bell and safety Cam Allen were named the Big Ten offensive and defensive players of the week, and the Boilermakers are ranked No. 25.

Now he must figure out how to use his strategy against future opponents.

Up next is an old foil, Wisconsin, which has climbed back to .500 and is starting to play its traditional style — a heavy ground game and a stingy defense. Brohm has not beaten Wisconsin since arriving on campus following the 2016 season. After last weekend, he's also lost the element of surprise.

But it appears Brohm wants to continue using Aidan O'Connell, Jack Plummer and Austin Burton together in some form even if it's not the same format employed last weekend when all three threw passes and accounted for 10 of Purdue's 33 carries.

One reason Brohm opted to try it was out of necessity.

Top running back Zander Horvath went down with a leg injury in Week 2, hasn't played since and Brohm said Monday that he didn't expect Horvath to return this week. Without Horvath, the Boilermakers' running back depth has been depleted.

So Brohm figured he'd give it a shot and the three quarterbacks made sure it worked.

"The unselfishness from our quarterbacks really stood out," Brohm said. "They didn't care who was in there, as long as they got a chance to go out there and play a little bit and have fun. They were excited about it. I even had Aidan suggesting one of the other quarterbacks go in as we got closer to the goal line on one occasion. So it was kind of refreshing and heartwarming."

They weren't the only Boilermakers having fun.

When a fan threw a beer can onto the field during the third quarter, offensive lineman Greg Long picked it up and dumped it inside his facemask, suds and all. The photograph became a social media sensation and even drew a favorable response from two-time All-Pro left tackle David Bakhtiari, who plays for the Green Bay Packers and wears the same number (69) as Long.

While some reveled, the deliberations over when to change quarterbacks and what plays to run left Brohm mentally fatigued.

"It wasn't an exact science. It wasn't something I had really done a whole lot before," Brohm said. "There was a little stress involved just making sure I picked the right time and moment. But some of that is you've just got to roll with it and be aggressive, and our guys really did a good job executing it."

The result: They're ranked for the first time since Oct. 1, 2007, before the 23rd-ranked Boilermakers lost to Ohio State and they plan to stick around for a while with a revamped approach.

"I didn't know if three quarterbacks were going to work or not work. Sometimes it can look really good and sometimes it's a complete bust, so it's the chance you take," Brohm said. "I wasn't sure I was going to have any success with it but we rode with it, and I thought a little bit of that worked."

Louisville to retire Heisman winner Jackson's No. 8 jersey

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Louisville plans to retire the No. 8 jersey of former Cardinals quarterback Lamar Jackson, the school's first Heisman Trophy winner.

Jackson's number will be retired during a ceremony at Louisville's Nov. 13 home game against Syracuse. Jackson joins Johnny Unitas as the school's only football players to have their numbers retired. Unitas' No. 16 was retired in 2003.

Athletic director Vince Tyra cited Jackson's Heisman and his 2019 NFL MVP award with the Baltimore Ravens as examples of the dynamic QB's talent and success. He also praised the player's humility that endeared him to Louisville teammates, coaches and staff.

"We're so proud to retire his No. 8 for what he has accomplished so far," Tyra said Saturday in a release, "but are equally excited about what's to come. This city has big L's up for our guy."

Jackson was the Heisman's youngest winner in 2016 at 19 years and 337 days.

Current Louisville receiver Tyler Harrell and defensive lineman Henry Bryant are wearing No. 8 and will finish this season in that jersey before its official retirement at the end of the year.

Jackson set or tied 42 Louisville program records in 38 games from 2015-17 and holds seven Atlantic Coast Conference marks. He rushed for at least 1,500 yards and passed for at least 3,500 in 2016 and '17, the only FBS player to accomplish the feat.

South Carolina, UConn, Stanford women top preseason Top 25

BY DOUG FEINBERG
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Dawn Staley and South Carolina are back in a familiar spot: No. 1 in The Associated Press Top 25 women's basketball poll.

It's the second consecutive season that the Gamecocks are the preseason favorite.

"With who we brought back and who added for this season, we knew we would start out among the hunted, and it's something that our program is getting used to," said Staley, who is going into her 14th season as South Carolina coach. "Watching practice every day, I can see that we have the pieces and the competitive fire to reach all of our goals. We have a few more weeks to put those pieces together into a cohesive, successful team that can live up to this preseason ranking."

The Gamecocks received 14 of the 29 first-place votes from a national media panel in Tuesday's poll. UConn was second, garnering 10 first-place ballots. It's the 15th consecutive season that the Huskies were among the top five teams in the preseason.

Defending national champion Stanford was third, getting the other five first-place votes. Maryland and North Carolina State rounded out the top five.

It's been a busy few days for Staley. The school announced a new, seven-year contract that will pay her $2.9 million this season and grow to $3.5 million in the final season. She also believes the $22.4 million deal should make an impact on her sport and in the equality of what men and women's coaches and athletes receive from their schools.

HOOSIER HYSTERIA

Indiana is No. 8, the school's highest ranking ever in women's basketball. There's a lot of excitement around Bloomington, with all five starters returning from a team that went to the Elite Eight last year and had its sixth straight 20-win season.

"It's great recognition for our program and a testament to our team and how they continued to get better throughout one of the most difficult and challenging seasons we had in the history of women's basketball," Indiana coach Teri Moren said. "We believe we have much to prove and are looking forward to what we know will be a challenging season in both non-conference as well as what we'll see in the Big Ten."

RISING WOLVERINES

Michigan also tied its best ranking ever, coming in at No. 11. The Wolverines return three starters, including Naz Hillmon, from the squad that lost to Baylor in overtime in the Sweet 16 last season.

Michigan coach Kim Barnes Arico called the ranking an honor and said her team was eager to build on the momentum from last spring.

"We have been able to take steps forward and grow as a program the past few seasons, doing things that had never been done before," she said. "Showing that consistency year in and year out is the sign of a great program, not just a great team."

HEARTLAND HOPES

There are high expectations in Iowa this year: The Hawkeyes are No. 9 and Iowa State is No. 12.

Iowa, led by star guard Caitlin Clark, has its its highest preseason ranking since the team was sixth in 1996.

Iowa State coach Bill Fennelly has a bulk of his starting five back, including Ashley Joens and Lexi Donarski. It's the team's best ranking in the preseason since 2001, when the Cyclones were eighth.

CONFERENCE WATCH

The Pac-12, Big Ten and ACC each have five ranked teams, tops in the nation:

Joining No. 4 Maryland, No. 8 Indiana, No. 9 Iowa and No. 11 Michigan is No. 17 Ohio State for the Big Ten.

In the Pac-12, No. 3 Stanford is joined by No. 10 Oregon, No. 14 Oregon State, No. 20 UCLA and No. 22 Arizona.

The ACC has No. 5 N.C. State, No. 6 Louisville, No. 16 Florida State, No. 17 Georgia Tech and No. 24 Virginia Tech.

Bellinger, Betts rally Dodgers, cut Braves' NLCS lead to 2-1

BY BETH HARRIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LOS ANGELES — Cody Bellinger keeps erasing a forgettable regular season, with his latest big swing putting the Los Angeles Dodgers right back in the NL Championship Series.

Bellinger hit a tying, three-run homer and Mookie Betts then lined an RBI double in the Dodgers' eighth-inning rally, storming back to beat Atlanta 6-5 Tuesday and cutting the Braves' lead in the series to 2-1.

"It's hard to remember a bigger hit, with what was at stake," Dodgers manager Dave Roberts said. "I'm kind of exhausted now."

Some of the 51,307 fans had already left when the Dodgers were down to their final five outs and facing the daunting prospect of a 3-0 deficit in the series. Bellinger swung and missed two pitches down the middle for strikes, going to his knees in the dirt.

"Ball's coming in hard, some shadows you're dealing with, so I saw it well and I just tried to barrel it up," Bellinger said. "Just continue to barrel up the ball and pass the baton."

Bellinger drove a shoulder-high, 95.6-mph fastball from Luke Jackson into the right-field pavilion, igniting the blue towel-waving crowd and reviving the hopes of the defending World Series champions.

"Sad thing is I would do the same thing again," Jackson said. "I was trying to throw a fastball up and away. I actually threw it better than I thought I threw it. Out of my hand, I was like, 'Oh, that's a ball. It's too high.' And no, it wasn't too high. Good player, put a good swing on it and pretty remarkable."

Chris Taylor singled, stole second and moved to third on pinch-hitter Matt Beaty's groundout. Betts followed with the double off Jesse Chavez to right-center.

"One of our strong suits is not worrying about what happened yesterday, focusing on right now," Betts said.

Game 4 is Wednesday at Dodger Stadium.

"We can do it, we're confident," Braves manager Brian Snitker said. "There is going to be no residual effects after this game."

The Dodgers had lost all 83 previous postseason games — in both Los Angeles and Brooklyn — in which they trailed by three or more runs in the eighth inning or later.

But that's history now. And so are Bellinger's recent struggles.

The 2019 NL MVP, Bellinger batted a miserable .165 this year with a paltry .240 on-base percentage and 94 strikeouts in 315 at-bats. He helped redeem himself last week with a tiebreaking single in the ninth inning of the decisive Game 5 of the NL Division Series against the rival Giants at San Francisco.

"Fresh start," Bellinger said of the postseason. "At least for me this year it's a fresh start. You know, a tough regular season but you know, I felt good towards the end of the season, and just try to continue that feel all the way through."

"Just you know, staying simple," he said. "Crazy things are happening."

Bellinger's done this before, too. After the Dodgers overcame a 3-1 deficit against Atlanta in the NLCS last year, his tiebreaking home run in the seventh inning won Game 7.

With the cheering, chanting crowd on its feet in the ninth, Kenley Jansen struck out the side to earn the save, the ninth pitcher used by the Dodgers. They ran through a combined 15 in the first two games.

Staggered with back-to-back walk-off losses in Atlanta, the Dodgers returned home, where they've dominated the Braves in recent years and were an MLB-best 58-23 during the regular season.

The Braves haven't won at Dodger Stadium since June 8, 2018. Going back to the 2013 NLDS, the Braves have dropped 20 of their last 23 in LA — they've lost 10 straight in Los Angeles overall.

It sure looked like they'd end that skid after leading 5-2 in the fifth.

After Corey Seager's two-run shot gave them an early lead, the Dodgers' offense stalled out from the second to eighth innings, with only five hits.

"It's never going to just be easy and handed to us," Bellinger said. "We got to fight for it."

But the wild-card winner staged another improbable comeback late, just like the Dodgers have done so often this postseason.

They beat St. Louis in the NL wild-card game, then edged 107-win San Francisco in the NLDS.

Despite trailing the best-of-seven series, the Dodgers have grabbed the momentum. They're at home for the next two games, knowing they overcame that 3-1 deficit against the Braves in last year's NLCS at a neutral site in Arlington, Texas.

The Braves built their lead with a bunch of singles, pounding out 12 hits, and a dropped flyball by novice center fielder Gavin Lux.

Freddie Freeman broke out of his slump, going 3 for 4 with a walk and a run scored after he struck out seven times in eight at-bats in the first two games.

Adam Duvall went 2 for 5, driving in two runs and scoring another for the Braves. Every Atlanta batter got on base at least once.

Tony Gonsolin got the victory, recording one out in relief.

Jackson took the loss after getting hammered in the eighth.

Eddie Rosario and Freeman jump-started the Braves with back-to-back singles off Walker Buehler to open the game.

The Braves quieted the crowd of 51,307 while knocking around Buehler and taking a 4-2 lead in the fourth.

Atlanta got RBI singles from Joc Pederson, Duvall and Dansby Swanson, and Buehler walked Rosario on four pitches with the bases loaded to force in another run.

Swanson's hit off his former Vanderbilt teammate went off the glove of shortstop Seager and rolled into left, allowing Pederson to score the go-ahead run as the Braves batted around.

Seager's wasn't the only miscue in the fourth. Lux chased Austin Riley's double to the warning track in right-center only to have the ball go off his glove to keep the inning going.

Buehler got yanked after walking Rosario. Working on two extra days' rest, Buehler allowed four runs and seven hits in 3 2/3 innings. The right-hander struck out three and walked three on 76 pitches.

Buehler pitched on short rest for the first time in his career in Game 4 of the NLDS. He didn't the win, but the Dodgers tied the series and forced a deciding fifth game.

Atlanta extended its lead to 5-2 in the fifth on Duvall's RBI single that scored Ozzie Albies, who walked and stole second.

The Dodgers had Charlie Morton on the ropes in the first, when he tied a postseason record with four walks on 34 pitches. The right-hander walked leadoff hitter Betts and Seager followed with a homer to center for a 2-0 lead.

Morton then loaded the bases on consecutive two-out walks to Justin Turner, Lux and Bellinger before Taylor lined out to short to end the inning.

Morton allowed two runs and three hits in five innings. The right-hander struck out five and walked six.

Astros awaken for 7 in 9th, beat Boston, 9-2, to tie ALCS 2-2

BY JIMMY GOLEN
P SPORTS WRITER

BOSTON — Jose Altuve hit a tying home run in the eighth inning and the Houston offense awakened with seven runs in the ninth on Tuesday night as the Astros came back to beat the Boston Red Sox 9-2, evening the AL Championship Series at two games apiece.

Six outs from falling behind 3-1 in the best-of-seven series and facing a Game 5 in Fenway Park — where Boston hadn't lost all postseason — the AL West champions instead guaranteed themselves at least one game back in Houston.

In a series that had been dominated by offense — especially Boston's — the teams traded first-inning homers and then both pitching staffs put up six straight zeros on the Fenway scoreboard before Altuve's leadoff shot in the eighth.

Carlos Correa doubled and scored the go-ahead run on Jason Castro's two-out single in the ninth. But that was just the beginning for Houston, which had seen Boston bully its pitchers for 10 homers in the series, including a record-setting three grand slams that turned Games 2 and 3 into routs.

"That's what they've been doing to us this whole series," Astros manager Dusty Baker said. "We're capable of doing that as well."

After Alex Bregman hit a solo homer into the Green Monster seats in the first, Xander Bogaerts topped it with a towering, two-run drive onto Lansdowne Street in the bottom half to give the Red Sox a 2-1 lead.

Then, the pitchers took over: It was still 2-1 when Altuve led off the eighth with a homer against Garrett Whitlock.

Game 2 winner Nathan Eovaldi, making his first relief appearance since he was coming back from an injury in 2019, came on for the ninth and gave up Correa's leadoff double. With two outs and two on, Castro singled in Correa to give Houston the lead.

And the Astros just kept on scoring.

Michael Brantley hit a three-run double off Martín Pérez. Yordan Alvarez added an RBI single. Correa reached on a run-scoring infield single. Kyle Tucker singled in another run.

The Red Sox, who were the first team in major league history to have double digits in hits six straight times in a single postseason, had just five on Tuesday — two of them trailing by seven in the ninth.

Eovaldi took the loss, allowing four runs while recording just two outs. Kendall Graveman, the fifth Houston pitcher, threw two scoreless innings for the win.

Bogaerts followed Bregman's 354-foot homer into the top of the first with a 403-foot shot in the bottom half that cleared the Wall, the seats and the billboards above them before landing on Lansdowne Street.

Nick Pivetta allowed just one more hit after Bregman's homer before leaving with a 2-1 lead through five innings.

It was the third straight game the Red Sox got five or more innings from a starter, and the third straight that the Houston starter didn't make it out of the second inning; Zack Greinke got just four outs on Tuesday.

Pivetta was charged with one run on two hits and two walks, striking out three. He got Altuve to end the fifth on a hard grounder to Rafael Devers at third. First baseman Kyle Schwarber made a nice play to scoop the throw; replays showed he pulled his foot off the bag, but the Astros did not challenge the call.

HOME RUN HISTORY

Altuve has 21 career postseason home runs, breaking a tie with Derek Jeter for third-most in baseball history. Manny Ramirez is the leader with 29, and Bernie Williams hit 22.

COMING IN HOT

Red Sox manager Alex Cora had to be pulled back by third base coach Carlos Febles after J.D. Martinez was called out on strikes for the second out of the third inning.

With Alex Verdugo stealing second on the 3-2 pitch, umpire Laz Diaz called Martinez out on a pitch that appeared to be off the plate. Martinez said a few words, then Cora came out of the dugout and Febles and on-deck hitter Christian Vázquez held him back.

Baker also came out, apparently to point out Martinez had interfered with catcher Martín Maldonado as he tried to throw out Verdugo. Diaz left Verdugo at second, and Hunter Renfroe struck out to end the inning.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Astros: CF Jake Meyers, who injured his left shoulder crashing into the wall in the Division Series clincher, was originally listed in the starting lineup but "wasn't quite ready yet," Baker said. Chas McCormick started in center instead.

Red Sox: Schwarber appeared to tweak his left hamstring on a swing in the fourth inning. He limped out a groundout and remained in the game.

UP NEXT

Game 5 is Wednesday at 5:08 p.m. Chris Sale is in line to start for the Red Sox after allowing one run over 2 2/3 innings in Game 1. It is Framber Valdez's turn again for Houston. He gave up two earned runs in 2 2/3 innings during the series opener.

Kentucky will honor ex-coach Smith with retired jersey

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kentucky plans to honor former coach Tubby Smith, who led the Wildcats to the 1998 NCAA men's basketball championship and multiple Southeastern Conference titles, by retiring a jersey later this year.

The ceremony is set for Kentucky's Dec. 31 home game against High Point, where Smith played college basketball and currently coaches.

Smith coached the Wildcats from 1997 to 2007 and guided the "Comeback Cats" through several double-digit deficits in the 1998 NCAA tournament to win the title in his first season, when he went 35-4. Smith had a 263-83 overall record with the program and won either a SEC regular season or tournament title seven times in 10 years.

Kentucky athletic director Mitch Barnhart told Smith about the honor on Tuesday during a surprise Zoom call, according to a news release. Smith called it "very humbling" and added that he was looking forward to the event.

"I'm certainly grateful to have had the opportunity to lead that program," Smith said during the call. "Some wonderful people there, wonderful fans. You can't find better people. They have a passion for the game, not just basketball but for the Wildcats, period."

Smith earned national coach of the year and SEC coach of the year honors three times each at Kentucky. His career has included stints at Tulsa, Georgia, Minnesota, Texas Tech and Memphis.

"It is with great pride, enjoyment and a sense of excitement that we add one more name to the list of people who will see their names in the rafters of Rupp Arena and that's Orlando 'Tubby' Smith," Barnhart said in the news release.

Morgan says investment must coincide with biennial World Cup plan

BY ANNE M. PETERSON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Alex Morgan said increased investment in the women's game must be part of any plan for a biennial World Cup.

Morgan, a star on the U.S. women's national team, is part of a FIFA technical advisory group announced this week that is looking into a proposal to stage the World Cup every two years.

"We looked at not only the financial part of it when it comes to the World Cup, but also increasing the number of federations that have women's teams that play year-round, not only play in qualifiers once every four years — or possibly in the future once every two years," Morgan said. "So how do we continue to incentivize and put more money into the women's game? That's a huge piece of it as well, I don't think you can have one without the other. You can't have a biannual World Cup without addressing the financial piece."

Former U.S. coach Jill Ellis is heading the group, which includes former and current players, coaches, referees and administrators.

Morgan is open to the biennial plan, but did not outright endorse it Tuesday while speaking to reporters ahead of the U.S. team's match against South Korea in Kansas City, Kansas.

"Just with the history of the World Cup, I think it's really difficult to grasp the concept of changing from every four years to two years because historically it's just what we've done and what we're used to," Morgan said. "But I also look at the growth of the women's game and how it could really benefit club leagues around the world, it could really benefit every federation and their players in terms of visibility, in terms of gaining more coverage for women's soccer."

FIFA revealed aspirations last month to redraft the calendar of international soccer competitions to accommodate holding the men's and women's World Cup every two years.

The idea has been widely criticized. UEFA and CONMEBOL have threated to boycott the tournament and the International Olympic Committee has also come out against the plan. FIFPro, the global players' union, has also raised concerns.

Morgan said a biennial World Cup is not a done deal, and that's why the advisory board is important.

"There's still a lot of discussions to be had, but I think this advisory board was created to listen to the players. So if all players said, 'No this is crazy, we cannot do this, this will hurt women's football globally in such a great way that we can't recover from this' is (FIFA President Gianni Infantino) and FIFA going to listen? Of course," she said. "That's what this advisory board is formed to do, is to have the consensus of the players that are actually going to be affected by this both positively and negatively. It's not a decision taken lightly."

CLINCH

go along with 10-of-11 serving and an ace.

Since being moved out of the 29th District against the three large Oldham County schools and back into the 31st last winter, Trimble County has qualified for the Eighth Region Tournament in three of the five team sports in which it has competed. Now, volleyball joins that group for the first time.

"It is wonderful. Last year we went in to face North (Oldham) in the first round and we knew it was a battle. This year, we have that feeling that we've got a chance," Jent said. "It feels good and it builds our program up makes more girls want to be a part of this program. It changes the whole mindset."

On Monday, Trimble opened the 31st District Tournament with a 25-16, 25-12, 25-15 whipping of Carroll County. Carroll ended its season with a 2-27 record.

Trimble, now 12-14, squared off against Eminence, now 18-5 and a 25-11, 25-16, 25-16 winner over Henry County on Tuesday, in the District Championship game on Wednesday. Due to Madison Courier deadlines, photos and story from that game will be published in Saturday's edition.

The Eighth Region Tournament begins on Monday and will be held at the site of the winner between Trimble and Eminence.

David Campbell

Trimble County's Maggie Ginn (11) goes up for a block against Owen County's Gwen Culberson during the 31st District Volleyball Tournament semifinals on Tuesday in Owenton.

COLTS

He's had a takeaway in four straight games and he's done it all on a bad ankle.

STOCK DOWN

Rock Ya-Sin. The third-year cornerback missed the previous two games with an ankle injury and left early against Houston with another ankle injury. Indy needs him on the field.

INJURIES

WR Parris Campbell is expected to multiple weeks and possibly the rest of the season after injuring his foot on a 51-yard TD catch in the first half.

Campbell has only appeared in 14 games in three years.

The Colts also won't know till later this week whether right tackle Braden Smith (foot/thumb), All-Pro guard Quenton Nelson (ankle) or defensive end Kemoko Turay (groin) will be available against the 49ers.

Reich said it's undetermined whether Nelson will practice this week.

Receiver T.Y. Hilton said he expected to play next week after injuring his quad during the fourth quarter Sunday.
